Republican Leaders Split Over Lilienthal

TAFT OPPOSES EX-TVA CHIEF ON ATOM BOARD

Stassen Favors Lilienthal
And Vandenberg Hints
He Will Give Support

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22—The senate's two most powerful Republican leaders today were on opposite sides of the fight over confirmation of David E. Lilienthal as the nation's atomic chief.

Sen. Robert A. Taft (R) Ohio, chairman of the powerful policy committee and regarded as the GOP's top man on domestic affairs, came out in a strong statement against Lilienthal.

Sen. Vandenberg (R) Mich., foreign relations chairman and the GOP's spokesman on international affairs, gave evidence that he will support Lilienthal by putting into the senate atomic committee record a pro-Lilienthal letter from famed scientist Karl T. Compton.

Observers foresaw in the situation a possible showdown between the two Republican leaders that might project itself into the 1948 presidential nomination contest.

Stassen Sees Confirmation

Lilienthal gained some support, meanwhile, when Sen. Pepper (D) Fla., and former Gov. Harold E. Stassen of Minn., announced that they favor the appointment of Lilienthal as "an able man" and Stassen predicted the senate would confirm the nomination.

In taking his stand, Taft joined three others of the GOP's top leadership — Majority Leader White (R) Maine, Majority Whip Wherry (R) Neb., and Sen. Bridges (R) N. H., chairman of the powerful appropriations committee.

'Soft' Toward Russia

Taft's statement against Lilienthal was strongly worded. He charged that Lilienthal is "soft" toward Communists and Russia and "temperamentally unfitted" to head an important agency.

Like the other GOP leaders, Taft accused Lilienthal of being arbitrary and contemptuous toward the senate, and then went further and charged that he was "power-hungry" and "guilty of dishonest practices" in his feud with Dr. A. E. Morgan within Tennessee valley authority.

Taft's accusation that Lilienthal is "soft" toward Russia included criticism of the Lilienthal report on world control of the atomic bomb.

Taft declared that he did not want to see a "man so muddled in his thinking on international power as Mr. Lilienthal" in charge of atom bomb policies.

'Threat To Safety'

The Ohio senator said that he would consider confirmation of Lilienthal "a real threat to our national safety."

Bridges hailed Taft's statement as "indicating a reasonable basis for believing Mr. Lilienthal will be rejected by the senate."

Sen. Morse (R) Ore., Lilienthal supporter, said he was "disappointed" by Taft's action. Hit-

Jury May Get Clifton Case Sometime Monday

Case against George Clifton, 23, who went on trial Wednesday in Pickaway county common pleas court under an indictment charging him with burglarizing the Veterans of Foreign Wars club early on the morning of Oct. 12, 1946, will likely be given to the jury of eight men and four women some time Monday. However, there appeared to be a slight possibility of the jury getting the case late Saturday.

Witnesses for the defense were testifying Saturday and Defense Attorney Joseph W. Adkins was expected to place Clifton on the witness stand to deny all knowledge of the robbery in which, according to testimony of Edgar W. Keyes, VFW club manager, and other state witnesses, the

BRITONS HAIL 'WHITE PAPER'

New Difficulties Raised By Blizzard Which Sweeps British Isles

By International News Service

Britons today accepted the government white paper demanding increased sacrifice and more production as a call to fight for continuance of their country as a first rate power.

Laborite members of parliament hailed the government's statement warning that more work must be done as the most human statement ever made by a British government.

The conservative opposition and liberal circles also accepted the survey as a candid diagnosis. These groups, however, lashed out against the government for not laying down a plan to improve the situation.

New difficulties confronted the British when another blizzard set the country back almost to the crisis point in the struggle to overcome the fuel shortage.

A storm which raged for more than 24 hours continued in Britain and caused further transportation tie-ups. Rail and road transport were disorganized by snowfalls which at some points reached 15 inches in depth.

A dispatch by the French press agency reported that China has sent a note to the big four foreign ministers asking the right to take part in the forthcoming March 10 conference.

China, it was said, never would accept decisions on which it had not been consulted, but said that decisions limited to Germany and Austria would be expected.

France was beset by spreading strikes despite opposition of

AMERICANS IN INDIA WATCHED

U. S. Ready To Evacuate Some 3,000 Residents If Strife Erupts

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22—The state department had a paternal eye today on some 3,000 Americans in India. About two-thirds of them are missionaries and their families.

Washington officials were not anticipating any disturbances between the Moslem and Hindu factions as a result of British Prime Minister Attlee's announcement that India would become independent of the empire by June, 1948.

It was recognized, however, that London's final decision to withdraw from India on a definite date conceivably could arouse political and religious differences to a high pitch.

A comprehensive plan for evacuation of American nationals is dating back to the critical days of World War II remains in effect.

Should there be internecine strife, the American consular service has a close finger on all U. S. citizens and is prepared to evacuate them immediately. It would be done primarily by plane if necessary.

Hindu press has been somewhat vociferous in attacking the United States as an imperialistic nation. To date, however, individual Americans have not been singled out for molestation in any of the numerous incidents of violence which have marked India's long fight for freedom.

Patrolman McGinnis testified that he participated in the search of the home of Clifton and Orin Diltz, 24, in Washington township, and that in a dresser drawer he "found" the revolver cylinder. The witness also said

CAPITAL BANDIT SUSPECT IS SHOT FLEEING POLICE

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 22—Columbus police shot and captured an armed holdup suspect today after a two-block chase.

The man, Billy Davisson, 20, Clarksburg, W. Va., was caught four hours after an armed bandit held up Western Union night manager Ben. F. Elliott. Earlier a man with a pistol walked into the Winton grill, and robbed Alex Parkervick, the bartender, of $150.

Police said Davisson admitted both robberies.

The bandit was in Grant hospital with a wound in his left leg below the knee.

Saturday marked another observance of the birth of George Washington, but the neighboring towns of New Holland and Atlanta had another reason to close up today.

Most of the residents from 2 to 92 came to Circleville in the afternoon so that they could watch their favorites battle for the title of 1947 Pickaway county basketball tournament champions Saturday night.

At Roll and Bowl late this afternoon they will be joined by hundreds of other Circleville and Pickaway county basketball fans, all trying to get into too small a space.

By the time Monroe and Williamsport battle for the consolation trophy and a trip to the district tournament, the playing floor will have shrunk as hundreds try to get in position to

SENATORS MAY CUT BUDGET BY FIVE BILLIONS

Republican Leader Favoring Smaller Reduction Sees New Compromise

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22—A senate Republican leader fighting to hold the overall budget cut to 4-1/2 billion dollars said today that the final house-senate compromise might go as high as 5-1/2 billions.

The estimate was given as the senate put off until next week its expected approval of a 4-1/2 billion dollar reduction in contrast to a house-approved slash of six billions.

"Five or five and one-half billions" was forecast by this responsible Republican as the likely reduction to emerge when house and senate conferees complete their juggling of actions taken by the two houses.

The overwhelming house vote in favor of the six billion cut, plus the predominance of six-billion supporters on the conference committee, was advanced as reason for the ultimate cut in President Truman's budget running deeper than previously indicated.

Sen. Vandenberg (R) Mich., supported the pending amendment for a 4-1/2 billion cut offered by Sen. Millikin (R) Col., senate finance chairman who will be one of the house-senate conferees.

Democrats were generally lining up to vote for the Millikin amendment Monday, on the theory that this was the lesser of "two evils." Many of the minority members, however, were prepared to fight against the final resolution—largely on the ground that the congressional recommendation was not supported by adequate information.

Sen. Myers (D) Pa., in a lengthy closing speech before the senate recessed for the weekend, warned that the budget committee's ceiling on expenditures might doom many worthy flood control projects already authorized by congress and under construction.

Citing his own state, he called attention to dike and reservoir projects at such traditional flood points as Williamsport, Pittsburgh, Wilkes-Barre and Punxsutawney, Pa.

CHAUFFEUR CAN BUY HIS OWN CAB WITH $1600 TIP

HAMILTON, BERMUDA, Feb. 22—Charles Amos was shopping for his own taxi cab today and in his pocket he had the $1600 to pay for it.

For the last four months, he had been driving for Mrs. Clarence Gasque, Chicago, widow of the London director for the Woolworth stores. One day Amos told her he hoped to save enough money to buy a cab of his own.

Yesterday she gave him a tip—$1600.

see at least part of the action in the tournament finals.

The first game should be good. The pressure will be off both teams and they can play good ball. Neither looked good Thursday night in losing in the semifinals but they should do better when they clash at 7:30 p. m. Saturday.

Williamsport won by one point when the teams met during the regular season. The winning basket came in the last few seconds of play—the only time Williamsport was ahead.

The championship game between New Holland and Atlanta, which is scheduled for 8:45 p. m., promises to be a hotly-contested affair. New Holland won twice during the regular season over Perry, but had a close game the second time they met.

Next week New Holland, Atlanta and the consolation winner will compete in the district tournament at Westerville.

TIGERS TO PLAY LINDEN MCKINLEY THURSDAY NIGHT

Circleville high school Tigers will play Linden McKinley at 8:40 p. m. Thursday in their first game in the 1947 central district class A basketball tournament at Westerville.

Coaches John Daugherty and Steve Brudzinski attended the tournament drawings held Saturday morning.

The tournament opens Thursday night and continues through March 8 with 19 teams competing for district honors.

Blast Blamed On Chemical Work In Lab

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 22—Police and fire department experts revealed today that a secret chemical formula caused the Los Angeles factory explosion in which at least 15 persons perished and 158 others were injured seriously.

Capt. Carl Halder, arson squad chief, said the formula involved the use of perchloric acid and acetic anhydride.

Halder asserted that Dr. Robert M. Magee, head chemist at the O'Connor Electro-Plating plant where the explosion originated was "well aware of the explosive nature of the solution with which he was working."

The police expert added: "We have learned that within the week Doctor Magee remarked to a fellow employe—I don't want to be around when this stuff takes off!"

Magee was in the plant at the time of the explosion, possibly supervising installation of a plastic screen in an acid tank, work of which was started an hour and 15 minutes before the terrific blast occurred.

No trace of him has been found. Also missing is Alice Shemeta Iba, 21-year-old Japanese-American girl who was assistant electrical chemist.

Identification of all 15 bodies recovered from the block of smoldering ruins was completed yesterday but search of the wreckage was continued for others possibly trapped.

TWO ARE HURT WHEN AUTO HITS PARKED VEHICLE

Clarence Thorne, Jr., 25, of 416 North Court street, Saturday was in Berger hospital suffering from injuries received when the automobile in which he was riding struck a parked car at 2:30 a. m. Saturday on Watt street.

Patrolmen Turney Ross and Alva Shasteen, who investigated the accident, reported the car was driven east on Watt street by Miss Thais Harden, 22, secretary, Stoutsville, and that when about 200 feet west of Washington street the car swerved to the left side of the street and hit the parked automobile of Denver Greenlee, 224 Watt street. The police report said the Greenlee machine was moved approximately 15 feet.

According to the police report Miss Harden suffered minor head injuries. Both cars were badly damaged, the report said.

LONDON, Feb. 22—Former president Herbert Hoover left London's Northolt airport today for Washington to report to President Truman on his European food inspection trip.

Ration Of 35 Pounds Sugar Seen

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22—Agriculture department officials said today that each American probably will be allowed 35 pounds of sugar in 1947—an increase of 10 pounds over the present annual ration.

Their forecast was based on the allocation by the international emergency food council to the United States of 6,800,000 tons of the world's available sugar supply for this year.

The 1947 allocation represents an increase of 1,400,000 tons over the 5,400,000 tons this country was allotted last year.

Agriculture department officials also predicted a substantial increase in this year's allowance of sugar to American industrial users, who now are limited to 60 percent of the amount they used in a 1941 base period.

Unlike a closed shop, where an employer contracts to hire only union employees, under a union shop the employer may hire non-union workers but they must subsequently join the labor organization, usually in 30 days, in order to retain employment.

Hartley said the committee had not yet reached agreement on the type of legislation required to outlaw industry-wide bargaining. He said he is inclined to limiting bargaining to the plants of a single company.

The chairman termed "completely unsatisfactory" a proposal by Sen. Ball (R) Minn., that local unions be permitted to bargain within a 100-mile area.

Hartley predicted congress will enact new labor legislation by March 31 "or pretty close to that."

He indicated that his committee also will write into its bill the following:

1. A ban on jurisdictional, wildcat and sympathy strikes.
2. Penalties for secondary boycotts.
3. Prohibitions against strike violence, destruction of property and picketing by non-strikers.
4. A provision permitting employers to communicate with their employees on contract provisions without fear of violating the national labor relations act.
5. Employers as well as employees to be permitted to petition the NLRB for an election.
6. Equality for both employer and employee in collective bargaining.
7. New governmental machinery for mediation and voluntary arbitration.

LABOR PEACE CITED BY U. S.

Labor Department Points To Record Of Few Strikes So Far In 1947

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22—The labor department pointed today to a score of important 1947 wage settlements as mounting evidence of a new-found determination on the part of labor and management to avoid strikes.

Edgar L. Warren, U. S. conciliation director, cited this week's west coast oil negotiations as "representative of the earnest effort being made by both unions and employers" to make collective bargaining work. He added:

"Just as it takes two to make a dispute, so it takes two to negotiate an agreement peacefully. Both the employers and the unions in the oil industry are to be commended for their success."

Warren pointed out that the first eight weeks of the year have been free of serious work stoppages, with settlements achieved in several industries which were shut down a year ago—oil, textiles, meat-packing and glass.

Warren said the next major labor-management deadline is in the rubber industry where contracts between the CIO rubber workers and the "big four"—Goodrich, Firestone, Goodyear and U. S. Rubber—expire March 1.

April will be the big month, however, on the industrial scene. John L. Lewis' coal miners have been ordered to stay at work only until March 31; CIO electrical workers' contracts expire in April, and the extension of the steelworkers' agreement runs out April 30.

FIRE FIGHTING FIRMS INDICTED FOR CONSPIRACY

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22—Attorney General Clark had today the return of a criminal indictment in Columbus, O., charging two corporations and four individuals with conspiracy to monopolize production and distribution of motor-driven fire apparatus.

Clark identified the corporations indicted by the federal grand jury as the American-La France-Foamite Corp., Elmira, N. Y., and the Seagrave Corp., Columbus, O.

The three count indictment charges that the two corporate defendants sell approximately 60 percent of the total annual production of motor driven fire apparatus in the United States.

Assistant Attorney General Wendell Berge, in charge of the anti-trust division said:

"The indictment indicates that municipalities pay exorbitant prices for their motor driven fire apparatus."

"The imposition of high prices upon municipalities for this vital equipment seriously hampers the procurement of adequate fire-fighting equipment by our cities and increases the hazards of fire in communities all over the nation."

ting Taft's charge that Lillenthal is "muddled" in his international thinking, Morse declared:

"I think Bob's statement is a jumble of muddled prejudices."

Sen. McMahon (D) Conn., predicted Taft's weight will not swing enough Republicans to defeat Lillenthal.

Democrats See Victory

Despite McKellar's optimism, a Democratic leadership spokesman remained confident that the senate outcome will bear out President Truman's prediction that Lillenthal will be confirmed. He said that Taft's opposition was expected and "hasn't changed" the situation.

He predicted that the Democrats will lose not more than eight votes on the issue, and that Republicans are rather evenly divided.

One pro-Lillenthal Republican made the hair-line forecast that Lillenthal will be confirmed by a margin of "just three votes."

31 MEN HELD IN SOUTH CAROLINA LYNCHING CASE

GREENVILLE, S. C., Feb. 22 —Thirty-one men were under formal arrest in Greenville today in connection with the lynching of a Negro last Monday at Pickens, S. C.

Sheriff R. H. Bearden said the entire group was already being held in jail for investigation when he signed the warrants.

They are charged with the slaying of Willie Earle, 35, who was forcibly removed from the Pickens jail and shot and stabbed to death by an unmasked mob.

Bearden said that 26 had signed confessions.

The lynch victim had been jailed in connection with the fatal stabbing of a Greenville taxi-driver. The sheriff said that the men under arrest included 29 cab drivers and two Greenville businessmen.

that he and Chief McCrady, Sheriff Charles Radcliff, and other officers including Howard G. Robinson, a Newark private detective, took Clifton to Columbus and that Clifton was questioned in the "crime laboratory" in that city. Patrolman McGinnis gave the testimony under direct examination by Prosecutor Robbins.

Under cross-examination by Defense Attorney Adkins, Patrolman McGinnis said the frame of the revolver was found by him in Clifton's truck the night Clifton voluntarily appeared at police headquarters in Circleville. Patrolman McGinnis denied having removed some cartridges from the dresser drawer in Clifton's home.

State Highway Patrolman Wells testified he was in the police station the night of Nov. 28 when Clifton entered and that he was with Patrolman McGinnis when the latter searched Clifton's truck near the police station. He said the search disclosed a rifle, a 32-caliber revolver, and the witness identified the gun which he said Patrolman McGinnis apparently found in the upholstery of the truck cab. Under cross-examination, however, by Defense Attorney Adkins the witness admitted he did not actually see Patrolman McGinnis find the gun in the truck.

Police Chief McCrady testified that Clifton underwent the "lie detector" test at Columbus in the presence of Chief McCrady, Patrolman McGinnis, Patrolman Turney Ross, and Detective Robinson, and that Clifton denied ever having committed any crimes in Circleville.

Chief McCrady further testified that while at Columbus the gun was shown to Clifton and that Clifton denied ever having seen it before. At that time, the witness said, the gun had no cylinder. On December 3, Chief McCrady testified, he and Patrolman McGinnis proceeded to the Clifton home with a search warrant and that Patrolman McGinnis found the gun cylinder.

Chief McCrady identified the gun and he declared that both the frame and the cylinder carried the number "13184."

Chief McCrady also testified that he went to the VFW club the morning of Oct. 12 after the burglary and that he was told that "$200 to $250" was missing from a slot machine and that money and cigars had been stolen from the back bar.

Under cross-examination Chief McCrady told of the claimed finding of the gun cylinder in the Clifton's home and he said the loot in the burglary consisted of the slot machine money, 18 cartons of cigars, $8 in pennies, that he kept a record of thievery, and he admitted that his record of the loot in the VFW burglary did not include the revolver among the listed loot.

Chief McCrady admitted that in his opinion "one or more" persons burglarized the VFW club and that he was unable to state just how the thief or thieves left the building because both front and rear doors were found open.

Judge William D. Radcliff decreed a full court session Saturday despite the fact that Saturday is Washington's birthday and a legal holiday.

Rebuttal witnesses to be presented by the state after the defense has finished the presentation of testimony are scheduled to include Detective Robinson.

COLD WEATHER DUE TO REMAIN OVER WEEKEND

By International News Service

Ohio's latest cold spell was aggravated today by winds of 30-mile-an-hour velocity and widely scattered snow flurries.

No relief over the weekend was sighted by weather bureau forecasters, who said this area was continuing to be affected by the eastern storm which has now moved through the New England states.

Low temperatures this morning ranged from 10 degrees above zero at Youngstown to 20 above at Cincinnati. Forecasters said similar low readings could be expected tomorrow and probably Monday.

Natural gas suppliers over the state were hopeful that the closing down of industries over the weekend would give them an opportunity to build up dwindling reserves. Meanwhile, the Ohio Fuel Gas company maintained its gas restriction to 110 of its largest industrial consumers.

Ageless Power

Once the pride of the countryside, the old mill stands in ruin, victim of time's relentless passing. Time brings sunshine and storm, growth and decay—and death. Power that once turned the old mill wheel flows on. The wheel itself is stilled.

All things made by man must crumble. Even the giant skyscrapers of our great cities must one day lie in ruin or be replaced. Only the forces set in motion by the Creator of all things have functioned since the beginning of time, will live on to infinity.

How often a builder has stood back with a sigh of pride at the completion of some structure whose finished design he had long dreamed about. Perhaps he felt that in a sense his mission had been performed and he considered the impact of his creation on the generations to come. With the passing of time, however, both the man and his dream have become a part of the forgotten past.

The power of God, however, flows on. New men come forth to build the monuments of another day. The mountains still pour down their water into the streams, the streams flow into the rivers and the rivers into the sea.

Likewise the power of God, and the gift of the Holy Ghost, flow into the souls of those who seek Him, renouncing worldly pride and selfishness. In the churches of our world, those who seek spiritual solace and inspiration find the knowledge and opportunity to achieve the "peace that passeth understanding" through faith which shall make all things possible.

The Good Shepherd

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL
(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for Feb. 23 is John 10, the Memory Verse being John 10:14, "I am the good shepherd; and I know mine own, and mine own know Me.")

JESUS THE Good Shepherd.
This chapter of John is a beautiful one. "The good shepherd, Jesus," says, enters the door into the sheep fold. "The thief who would steal the sheep, comes in some other way."

At night in Palestine the sheep are brought to the fold by the shepherd after the day's grazing. The fold is a walled enclosure such as may be seen in American sheep farms, only the walls are higher. A porter guards the sheep at night, and in the morning the shepherd comes to take them out again. As the different shepherds enter the fold, each calls to his own sheep and they know his voice and follow him. They will not follow a voice they do not know—"And a stranger will they not follow, but will flee from him for they know not the voice of strangers."

Later Jesus says, in the same chapter, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, I am the door of the sheep. All that ever came before Me are thieves and robbers; but the sheep did not hear them. I am the door; by Me if any man enter in, he shall be saved, and shall go in and out, and find pasture."

False prophets had come before Christ. The rulers of the synagogues strove to make the people follow the rules laid down for them, to observe the forms and ceremonies, but they did not touch their hearts and souls. Jesus showed them—or tried to—how to live and what to believe that they might be saved, but "they understood not what things they were which He spake unto them."

Would Give His Life

Continuing the parable, Jesus told them that He was the good shepherd who would give His life for his sheep. Well He knew that sooner or later if He continued His teaching, He would be killed—would give up His earthly life. He was willing. He had only to cease preaching and healing to save Himself. He could have gone to any quiet place and been still, and no one would have molested Him. But that was not His mission. That was to give His life for the sheep.

"But he that is a hireling, and not the shepherd, whose own the sheep are not, seeth the wolf coming, and leaveth the sheep, and fleeth; and the wolf catcheth them, and scattereth the sheep. The hireling fleeth, because he is an hireling, and careth not for the sheep."

The hireling was being paid to care for the sheep, but they were not his, and if danger came he would run and leave them to their fate. "As the Father knoweth Me, even so know I the Father; and I lay down My life for the sheep. . . . No man taketh it from Me, but I lay it down of myself. I have power to lay it down, and have power to take it again. This commandment have I received of My Father."

The Jews were divided in their feelings toward this Man who preached so strangely. Some said, "He hath a devil, and is mad; why hear ye him?" Others said, "These are not the words of him that hath a devil. Can a devil open the eyes of the blind?"

Jesus in Jerusalem
This sermon on the good shepherd was given in Jerusalem in October, A. D. 29, the latter events occurred in December of the same year, also at Jerusalem. Jesus walked in the temple in Solomon's porch. The Jews came around Him and said, "How long dost Thou make us to doubt? If Thou be the Christ, tell us plainly."

Jesus answered them, "I told you, and ye believed not; the works that I do in My Father's name, they bear witness of Me. But ye believed not, because ye are not of My sheep, as I said unto you. My sheep hear My voice, and I know them, and they follow Me. My Father which gave them to Me is greater than all; and no man is able to pluck them out of My Father's hands, and I and My Father are one."

At that the Jews took up stones to stone Him, and Jesus said to them, "Many good works have I showed you from My Father; for which of those works do ye stone Me?"

They said, "For a good work we stone thee not; but for blasphemy; and because that Thou, being a man, makest Thyself God."

Jesus had the answer for them then, too, quoting their own scriptures (Psalm 82:6): "Is it not written in your law, I said, Ye are gods? If he called them gods, unto whom the word of God came, and the scripture cannot be broken: Say ye of him, whom the Father hath sanctified, and sent into the world, Thou blasphemest; because I said, I am the Son of God?"

"If I do not the works of My Father, believe Me not. But if I do, though ye believe not Me, believe the works; that ye may know, and believe, that the Father is in Me, and I in Him."

Again they sought to take Him, but He slipped away, and went beyond Jordan to the place where John had baptised Him, "for His time was not yet come."

THE SPIRIT OF PARTY

WITH A long and hard campaign already started, a year and a half yet to go, this is a good time to refresh the memory as to Washington's warning on the subject of parties. Here it is, slightly shortened: "I have already intimated to you the danger of parties in the state, with particular reference to the founding of them on geographical discriminations. Let me now warn you in the most solemn manner against the baneful effects of the spirit of party, generally. This spirit, unfortunately, is inseparable from our nature, having its root in the strongest passions of the human mind. It exists under different shapes in all governments.

"The alternate domination of one faction over another, sharpened by the spirit of revenge, natural to party dissension, is itself a frightful despotism. But this leads at length to a more formal and permanent despotism. The disorders and miseries which result gradually incline the minds of men to seek security and repose in the absolute power of an individual; sooner or later the chief of some prevailing faction, more able or more fortunate than his competitors, turns this despotism to the purposes of his own elevation, on the ruins of public liberty.

"Without looking forward to an extremity of this kind, the common and continual mischiefs of the spirit of party are sufficient to make it the interest and duty of a wise people to discourage and restrain it.

"It serves always to distract the public councils and enfeeble the public administration. It agitates the community with ill-founded jealousies and false alarms; kindles the animosity of one part against another, foments occasionally riot and insurrection. It opens the door to foreign influence and corruption, which find a facilitated access to the government itself through the channels of party passions. Thus the policy and the will of one country are subjected to the policy and will of another.

"There is an opinion that parties in free countries are useful checks upon the administration of the government and serve to keep alive the spirit of liberty. This within limits is probably true. There will always be enough of party spirit for every salutary purpose. And, there being constant danger of excess, the effort ought to be, by force of public opinion, to mitigate and assuage it. A fire not to be quenched, it demands a uniform vigilance to prevent its bursting into a flame, lest, instead of warming, it should consume."

In the 150 years since that speech was delivered, Sept. 17, 1796, parties have proved themselves useful, necessary, inevitable. But surely civilized people could discuss honest differences of opinion and come to agreement or reasonable compromise without party strife and personal bitterness?

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22—The Russians are rolling out, for the March Moscow conference on the German peace treaty, a welcome doormat which is about one inch wide and studded with thistles. What they are up to, no one around the state department appears to know for sure. Yet certainly Stalin's advance propaganda is designed to make all walk a straight and narrow path as Russia directs, and to soften our officials into a frightened tenderness.

Having attacked the American religious and peace minded delegate, George Foster Dulles, as a war monger, the Russian government officially sent a note declaring the state undersecretary Acheson to be "rudely slanderous" and "hostile toward the Soviet Union" for having said simply this: "Russia's foreign policy is an aggressive and expanding one."

Acheson did not volunteer this comment. He offered what the Soviets call "inadmissible behavior" under questioning by a congressional committee on the doubtful Lillenthal appointment. It may be inadmissible for anyone to speak out in Russia, but in a democracy it is paramourly necessary for a government official to answer frankly the questions of congress. Further, what Acheson said would not be inadmissible at a diplomatic pink tea.

The word aggressive means "disposed to vigorous outgoing activity in behalf of an object." Any undeluded person in the realm of reason must consider the term "aggressive" as applied to Soviet diplomacy to be accurately and mildly descriptive. The Soviets have certainly been beligerently aggressive in Iran, have swallowed Latvia, Estonia and Lithuania, and their Communists pride themselves on being politically aggressive throughout Europe and Asia, as do their delegates in UN.

Acheson also said Soviet policy was "expanding", which means "enlarging, swelling, spreading out." Anyone who claims it is not would do violence to the plain facts which are no secret to any adult American. Russian foreign policy is thoroughly in accord with world Communism, which is bent on world conquest.

Off the record around here, some officials used to say when they saw the Soviets doing violence to language and reason: "The Russians are crazy, but not that crazy." Now these same men say they are not so sure. The behavior of Russia diplomatically of late has been inimical to the simplest of common sense. It is becoming inadmissible to reason.

Diplomats feel they run a danger of Moscow attack if they simply say today: "Russia is Russia," or "today is a fine day."

Indeed some wish to send Russia's world activities to a psychiatrist for the answer.

However, this is not the general studied viewpoint of the close followers of the Soviet technique. Russia does not bother much about reason, only about reasons. Her motives are less a mystery to the new military regime than to the old Byrnes political crowds which ran the state department for so long. I think the average impression here is that Stalin (through Molotov) has really outdone himself this time in stretching his professed willingness to be offended at the slightest murmur. He has reduced his pressures to absurdity. The old Roosevelt crowd used to consider Stalin's sensitivity as an inferiority complex. This theory held some weight until evidences of the Russian superiority complex accumulated in denial of it after the war.

Treating Throat Disorders With a Powder of Penicillin

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

FOR most types of sore throat, penicillin is the best of remedies, or would be, if it could be kept in contact with the tissues of the throat long enough to kill germs causing the disorder. In the past this has been the problem. Penicillin lozenges and tablets have both been tried, but they dissolve so quickly when placed in the mouth or under the tongue that the effects of the penicillin are too fleeting to do much good, in most cases. Today, however, we have penicillin in a new form—as a powder or snuff. According to Drs. Richard G. S. Meadley and Harold F. Barnard of London, it is most effective when used in this way for the treatment of throat conditions.

In Small Bottle

The penicillin is mixed with sulfathiazole and is kept in a small bottle. A small amount of the mixture is poured onto a piece of paper two inches square, which is creased from one corner to the other. With the head back and one nostril closed with a finger, the mixture is poured from the paper into the other nostril while the patient sniffs it in. The procedure is then repeated on the other side. The mixture is slowly carried back by the little hair-like structures in the nose known as cilia until it reaches the throat and back surfaces of the tongue. Swallowing and movements of the tongue then bring some of it forward.

Penicillin Still Present

Tests carried out by these physicians showed that penicillin was still present from one to four hours after the use of this snuff. One advantage of this method of treatment is that it brings the penicillin in contact with the tissues of the nose, the back part of the nose, the openings of the sinuses and the middle ear.

About 27 patients with acute tonsillitis were treated with this snuff while 30 others were used as controls and were treated in other ways. In those treated with the penicillin mixture the relief of symptoms was rapid whether the infection was due to streptococci or to Vincent's organisms which cause trench mouth. Those treated with the penicillin made more rapid recoveries and could return to their usual work on an average of two days sooner than the patients treated in other ways.

This looks like the answer to a good many cases of severe sore throat. The treatment is simple, without danger or inconvenience to the patient and far more rapid than any we have had in the past.

* STARS SAY —

For Saturday, February 22 THIS is a holiday with much promise of enjoyment and festivity, but in a thoroughly discreet and conventional manner. There is danger of accident and regret from a breach of the laws, romantic and civic. Judgment may be confused and unreliable and the emotions and impulses ready to take daring chances, impelled by strange contacts or peculiar personages.

Those whose birthday it is may find a good opening for change and new contacts in social, domestic and cultural life, as well as in business affairs. However, erratic impulses might negative such fair prospects, since judgment is apt to be unreliable. Heed to the conventional and regular in order to avoid regrets.

A child born on this day may have kindly, laudable intentions, but impulses, emotions and mentality might swerve it into the dangerous and erratic path.

For Sunday, February 23 SUNDAY'S Horoscope is an excellent one for seeking promotion, honors, many forms of recognition and preferment from superiors, dignitaries, employers or friends in position and power. Seek rewards of merit and apply sound and steady efforts for future security and solidarity.

On the Birthday Those whose birthday it is are assured of a year of progress on which future stability and enduring good fortunes may be based. Influential friends, dignitaries, and employers may be found generally to give recognition for all truly meritorious efforts in this direction. Work for rich and enduring futures and sound security.

A child born on this day will be graciously endowed with sturdy character and abilities and should look forward to a stable future with recognition and support from those in high places.

A NEW "executive-type" desk has a business and a play side. This refutes that old saw about not mixing business with pleasure.

Speaking of "mixing"—the desk has compartments for bottles, glasses, ice trays and other mixings.

The contraption even contains a combination-lock safe in which the executive may store his dough if he has any left after buying all the desk accessories.

The business side of the desk contains an electric razor and a mirror. The only thing missing, apparently, is a curtained shower.

Zadok Dunkopf says he'd like to have one of the desks. Photos of it show the top has plenty of room in which to deposit one's feet.

Since his office is his hat Dummy is not exactly a hot prospect in the desk market.

CHAPTER THIRTY-ONE

IT WAS barely dawn when Cliff saddled and took the trail up through the dripping jungle to Big Swamp. The night air, cool and damp, came flowing down from the hills, but he was only dimly aware of its refreshing touch. A host of doubts beset him as he rode, and the closer he approached the swamp, the more he questioned his own wisdom in coming. He was risking imprisonment and leaving his men without a leader on a long gamble. But he could think of no other way. Whatever the danger, he had to know if Norman and Vicente were actually planning a raid. The vital thing—more vital than ever now—was to prevent a fight with the Blacklanders. That hope alone made it worth the chance.

At the edge of the swamp he forced his unwilling horse down over the bank and out through the stagnant water, following the line of mangroves until at last the low contour of the island showed dimly through the mist. Head bent forward, eyes intent upon his narrow foothold, Cliff had almost reached the island's edge when he felt his horse rear, and looking up, saw Vicente watching him from the bank.

For a bare instant Cliff hesitated, then touching his horse, climbed out of the marsh. Directly before Vicente he reined in. Not since the night of his capture had he seen the giant Blacklander, and now as he looked again into those tawny, hostile eyes, he felt the same sense of wonder at the bulk and latent strength of that huge figure. Even on horseback Cliff's shoulders were scarcely level with Vicente's.

The Blacklander spoke first. "How did you find this place?"

"I followed Dr. Norman's tracks."

"You were foolish to come here. You will never leave."

"Dr. Norman can decide that. My business is with him."

"And my business is with you," Vicente took a step nearer. "Get off that horse." His voice quivered with the eagerness of a hunting dog; the mouth all too clearly foretold his intention to force a fight—and conflict was the one thing Cliff wanted to avoid.

"I have no quarrel with you, Vicente," he said quietly. "I came here to see your chief."

At the big breed's laugh, Cliff realized that Vicente thought he was afraid. But it was too late. Before he could speak again, Vicente's arm wrapped about his waist and ripped him bodily from the saddle. Towering over him, the Blacklander took a half step back, then raising his open hand, struck Cliff full in the face. The force of the blow whirled Cliff to the edge of the bank, and barely he saved himself from falling.

Slowly he turned; his own eyes had gone red. His face was on fire, and something within him snapped. The impelling need to avoid a quarrel, the purpose of his visit, were both forgotten. He felt only the sting of that contemptuous blow and the blood, like a hammer, in his ears.

Before him Vicente stood, still smiling, and Cliff took a step forward.

"You asked for this—I didn't," he growled. "Come on."

No time for more—swift as a cat Vicente was on him. Twice Cliff struck, twice his fists beat into that huge, dark face, but headless of the punishing blows, the big breed closed in for the kill.

Before the menace of Vicente's outstretched hands, Cliff gave ground, keeping just beyond arm's length, then, gathering himself, he struck again. His feet caught in the undergrowth, he fell, but was up as Vicente's fingers fastened about his shoulder, and with the strength of desperation Cliff lashed out wildly with both hands. For a second the Blacklander's grasp weakened, and Cliff jerked back with all his might. His shirt ripped to the waist, he felt the dery sting of lacerated flesh, but he was free.

Bearlike and crouching, bruised and bloody face thrust forward, Vicente was coming in again, his great gorilla hands weaving horribly. Steadily, mercilessly, he was driving Cliff back to where there would be no room to escape those avid, clutching hands. Cliff saw his danger. Striking, dodging, slashing out with long, clean blows, he knew his only hope lay in keeping Vicente away. Time after time he marked the face of his slower adversary, but it was as if Vicente did not even feel the force of blows that would have beaten a smaller man to insensibility.

Almost at the edge of the swamp now—and for both of them almost the end of human endurance. Their breath came in strident, labored gasps; Vicente's face was bleeding, and Cliff's torn shoulder burned like fire, but all unmindful and beyond the stab of pain they fought on, like animals, held by the savage urgency of blood-lust, while inch by inch Vicente drove Cliff nearer the edge.

Once more a savage rush forced him a step backwards. There could be no more retreat—he was on the very brink. Ten feet below him lay the yellow waters of the swamp; and standing himself, Cliff sprang. Squaring on Vicente's jaw his fist struck home; he saw the big breed wince, but in that same instant two hands closed vice-like about his throat—and held. Frantically, arms hammering like pistons, Cliff rained blow after blow into the other's face, cutting, bruising, flailing, to break that killing hold, but the fingers only tightened.

Cliff's lungs were crying for air; his heart pounded in an agony of suffocation, and helplessly he clawed at the steel wrists, while Vicente's bruised and swollen lips twisted in a smile. Little by little Cliff felt his knees weakening, a mist gathered before his eyes, and, deeper than any physical pain, he felt the black agony of defeat. With one last desperate summons of strength, he threw himself backwards over the bank, pulling Vicente after him.

Locked together, turning slowly, the two men struck with a splash. Thick, slimy water closed over them, but those strangling hands never relaxed, and gathering his feet beneath him, Cliff thrust them upwards into Vicente's chest and kicked. Torn violently apart by the sudden impact, the fingers loosened, and Cliff fought his way to the surface for the supreme gift of air. Waist deep, he crouched, coughing the water from his lungs, and with trembling hands wiped the scum out of his eyes. He took a wobbly step toward the bank, but at a sound he whirled.

Scarcely a yard away Vicente struggled in the swamp. Shoulder deep, eyes glazed with terror, the breed was beating the stagnant water to yellow froth, and Cliff felt himself sickened in horror—Vicente had been caught in a quicksand pocket. Helplessly clutching the air, the huge hands rose, but the man's very efforts drew him deeper. Already his shoulders were settling beneath the surface.

Frantically Cliff waded toward him, then stopped. Useless to try pulling him out—worse than useless, for he would only join Vicente—and scrambling up the bank, Cliff raced to his horse. The animal reared in fright, but seizing the bit, Cliff led him to the water's edge, and uncoiled the riata from his saddle.

With the rope between his teeth, he slid back into the swamp, but at the first step felt the mire sucking at his ankles, and throwing himself flat, he inched forward. A second later he had slipped the noose beneath Vicente's armpits, and hand over hand dragged himself back to shore. Weakly he staggered—he was near the end.

For a moment everything reeled before his eyes, then steadying himself, he jerked on the bit. The horse moved a few steps, the rope grew taut.

Again Cliff pulled. The horse strained against the sudden weight, and from down in the swamp came a gurgling moan, while slowly, like some monster of the depths, the form of Vicente rose from the ooze that covered him, and was dragged to solid ground.

Kneeling, Cliff loosened the rope. The Blacklander's eyes were closed, he lay motionless, scarcely breathing, and twice Cliff tried to raise him, but now the strain of that wretched duel was taking its toll. Feebly, for the last time, Cliff tried to lift the heavy body, then all the world went black.

Cliff woke to a sense of coolness and light. Vaguely he realized that he was lying on a cot, and that by his side an Indian woman sat fanning him. He looked down and saw he was stripped to the waist, and that his shoulder had been bandaged.

Slowly, as his head cleared, he began piecing together disjointed fragments—Vicente, the fight, something else. Something—it was important, but too tired to remember. He closed his eyes, giving himself up to the delicious sensation of utter rest, and again he may have slept, for at the sound of a door creaking he saw a man bending over him.

A man not tall, but with strong, vigorous shoulders and thick red hair, gazing at the temples. The brow rose high and broad, but it was the eyes that held Cliff—gray eyes, shrewd and understanding. They were gazing at him with a look Cliff suddenly remembered—

Dr. Norman. He was searching it was almost disconcerting—and in that first impact of mutual appraisal, Cliff recognized Dr. Norman. (To Be Continued)

HE WOULDN'T GIVE UP

GEORGE WASHINGTON had a lot of qualities which would have been useful at the bridge table. Among those was his refusal to give up when things looked dark. He kept right on, with his plucky little army until they won. You can bet that, on defense against a No Trump contract, he would not have discarded from his own established long suit while still retaining a side entry, in order to protect another suit, if there was any reasonable possibility his partner might prevent the game trick there.

Chile's Claim to Antarctica Anti-Strike Bill Legislation Involves the Monroe Doctrine Seen Before July Adjournment

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—It may take some time to develop, but one of the stiffest international legal fights ultimately will be waged over conflicting claims to the millions of square miles of ice-capped lands being explored by half a dozen nations.

There is no doubt of the metal deposits which lie below the ice-caps of Antarctica, and, even if atom-precious uranium lies there, its removal offers a handicap that could not be overcome in the near future.

However, man's inability to achieve the impossible has been demonstrated so many times that the world's major powers are taking no chances. Observers agree that it is doubtful if present claims to isolated polar land masses could lead the powers to go to war over them.

The claims ultimately may be settled by arbitration of the International Court of Justice at the Hague.

Chile, which has asserted a claim through the statements of her president, Juan Antonio Rios, has gummied up the works as far as the United States is concerned. For Chile maintains that the entire Antarctica is a part of Chile.

Her statesmen claim that the area is merely an outcropping of earth of the Andes mountains, which form a spine down Chile's back. The real competition lies in Chile's reasoning that, as part of Chile, Antarctica is really a part of the western hemisphere. Therefore, Chileans argue that the United States is committed, under the Monroe Doctrine, to prevent their passing into the hands of any non-American country.

This, of course, would bar any claims of Russia or Great Britain,

NEWS Behind the NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

Personally I think Stalin learned diplomacy from Hitler. You will recall Hitler was alternately frightening the world and being offended by it, and his technique brought him many things he wanted.

That game somehow has worn out. People are familiar with it, particularly military people. They are less inclined to fall into whatever pattern of action the dictators try to chase them. Words and politics annoy them. They want to know the facts and they want to act on the facts. In view of this maintenance of realism, what the state department and General Marshall in his official note responding to the Russian protest have said publicly about the incident, is really only a part of what they actually think.

I wish someone would call me "aggressive" and "expanding" in my endeavors. I would consider it a high compliment.

FANS BROUGHT HANK INTO FOLD

Greenberg Signs Contract With Pirates After Urging By Public

NEW YORK, Feb. 22—There was neither ulterior design nor hanky-panky of any sort behind Hank Greenberg's extended program of hot-and-cold running tactics with the Pittsburgh Pirates, and right decisively did he say so today.

He said, in fact, that there had been very little hesitancy on his part—and only one change of mind.

That was when he signed an estimated $85,000 one-year contract with the Pirates yesterday. Two weeks before, he'd publicly announced that he wouldn't.

What finally did cause him to change his mind. Two things, said the 1946 major league home run champion; and it seemed that neither of these was persistence by the Pittsburgh management. The latter, according to Hank, was a more or less negative factor in influencing his final decision.

It was the Pittsburgh fans who caused the reversal with letters of appeal which he said numbered hundreds.

Words of Wisdom

Nothing is harder to direct than a man in prosperity; nothing more easily managed than one in adversity.—Plutarch

Today's Horoscope

The person who has a birthday today should cultivate self-confidence, self-esteem, and a better outlook on life. You are too apt to be pessimistic. You are capable of great things, if you will accept the present happiness and not worry about the future. You are generous to a fault, and can love deeply. This morning may have proved depressing and troublesome, but later in the day optimism is in the air. Do not let yourself be deceived by specious promises during the year now starting. Avoid extravagance and law. Peruse all documents carefully, and do not let your heart rule your head. Generous and very kind-hearted will be the child who is born today, fond of travel but threatened with serious trouble through false friends, correspondence and improvidence.

Hints on Etiquette

It is not necessary to thank a maid or waitress when she passes food to you at dinner.

Horoscope for Sunday

You always will enjoy good health and prosperity. You are far-sighted, determined, and well-balanced, just, loving and generally well liked by all your friends and associates. Your home is very dear to you. This day inclines toward confusion, wishful thinking and incitations. The evening, however, favors public contacts and dealing with groups. Conflicting influences predispose to some gain in your next year, followed by loss through deception or over-generosity. Watch expenditure. Have nothing to do with get-rich-quick schemes. Keep to routine. A child who is born on this day should early be taught to realize the value of money and not to allow the emotions undue sway. Friends and business associates will need to be carefully chosen.

- One-Minute Test Answers
1. At Cana.
 2. Bethany.
 3. The Sea of Galilee.

PETER LORRE GUEST

Peter Lorre will guest on the Music Hall on Thursday, February 27, at 9 p. m. Emcee Eddy Duchin and comedy star Eddie Foy will be his hosts, and music for the half-hour variety program will be provided by Vocalist Milena Miller, the Mills Brothers, and Russ Case and his orchestra. Three of Peter Lorre's most recent pictures — "The Chase," "The Verdict" and "Beast With Five Fingers" have had murder as their main theme. He has been cast in so many mysteries that he is practically able to solve the perfect crime himself! The monotony of this typing has called on him, however, and he is expected to tell Eddy Duchin Thursday night that he really wants to do a musical comedy for a change. With Duchin, key-board artist extraordinaire, and Foy, former star of "The Red Mill", around to coach him, he should go far in modern musical extravaganzas.

which time Kaye and his ABC "Sunday Serenade" crew will settle down in New York for a lengthy engagement at the Capitol Theater.

Interest in the three-act play based on NBC's "A Date With Judy" show continues to mount; more than 1,200 amateur theatrical groups have now staged the popular drama.

Next picture for Penny Singleton and Arthur Lake, starred on "Blondie" over CBS Sunday nights, will be "Blondie in the Dough." Previous title was "Blondie Sees Stars."

Eddie Bracken Show will be replaced by a new program starring Tony Martin with guest artists, effective March 30. Program will originate from Hollywood. ABC suspending all television programming activities for remainder of 1947 in order to concentrate on constructing additional facilities in Detroit, San Francisco, Los Angeles and Chicago. Kraft reportedly to bankroll an NBC television stanza on Thursday nights directly opposing their Music Hall program. Universal International Pictures has purchased about $100,000 worth of air advertising time to exploit their soon to be released film, "The Egg and I" Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy to broadcast their March 16 program from Mexico City. NBC reports it has entertained 18,083,968 guests in Radio City between the years 1934-1946. 5,950,168 guests were conducted on NBC tours, the rest viewed broadcasts. Walter O'Keefe to replace Don McNeill as toastmaster of ABC's "Breakfast Club" for two weeks beginning February 24, while McNeill vacations. "Information Please" on CBS will not be heard on March 5, due to substitution of a public service program, "The Eagle's Brood," an expose on juvenile delinquency. Bob Feller has been signed to broadcast a quarter-hour weekly show "Baseball Today" via open-end transmissions. Guest baseball stars will be featured.

Dennis Day making plans to tour Ireland and the British Isles during the Summer if his program goes off the air during the hot months. Success of Jo Stafford's folk song singing on a recent "Supper Club" stanza may lead to more of same on future airings.

Republican Leaders Split Over Lilienthal

TAFT OPPOSES EX-TVA CHIEF ON ATOM BOARD

Stassen Favors Lilienthal
And Vandenberg Hints
He Will Give Support

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22—The senate's two most powerful Republican leaders today were on opposite sides of the fight over confirmation of David E. Lilienthal as the nation's atomic chief.

Sen. Robert A. Taft (R) Ohio, chairman of the powerful policy committee and regarded as the GOP's top man on domestic affairs, came out in a strong statement against Lilienthal.

Sen. Vandenberg (R) Mich., foreign relations chairman and the GOP's spokesman on international affairs, gave evidence that he will support Lilienthal by putting into the senate atomic committee record a pro-Lilienthal letter from famed scientist Karl T. Compton.

Observers foresaw in the situation a possible showdown between the two Republican leaders that might project itself into the 1948 presidential nomination contest.

Jury May Get Clifton Case Sometime Monday

Case against George Clifton, 23, who went on trial Wednesday in Pickaway county common pleas court under an indictment charging him with burglarizing the Veterans of Foreign Wars club early on the morning of Oct. 12, 1946, will likely be given to the jury of eight men and four women some time Monday. However, there appeared to be a slight possibility of the jury getting the case late Saturday.

Witnesses for the defense were testifying Saturday and Defense Attorney Joseph W. Adkins was expected to place Clifton on the witness stand to deny all knowledge of the robbery in which, according to testimony of Edgar W. Keyes, VFW club manager, and other state witnesses, the

U. S. Ready To Evacuate
Some 3,000 Residents
If Strife Erupts

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22—The state department had a paternal eye today on some 3,000 Americans in India. About two-thirds of them are missionaries and their families.

Washington officials were not anticipating any disturbances between the Moslem and Hindu factions as a result of British Prime Minister Attlee's announcement that India would become independent of the empire by June, 1948.

It was recognized, however, that London's final decision to withdraw from India on a definite date conceivably could arouse political and religious differences to a high pitch.

A comprehensive plan for evacuation of American nationals dating back to the critical days of World War II remains in effect.

Should there be internecine strife, the American consular service has a close finger on all U. S. citizens and is prepared to evacuate them immediately. It would be done primarily by plane if necessary.

Hindu press has been somewhat vociferous in attacking the United States as an imperialistic nation. To date, however, individual Americans have not been singled out for molestation in any of the numerous incidents of violence which have marked India's long fight for freedom.

BRITONS HAIL 'WHITE PAPER'

New Difficulties Raised By Blizzard Which Sweeps
British Isles

By International News Service
Britons today accepted the government white paper demanding increased sacrifice and more production as a call to fight for continuance of their country as a first rate power.

Laborite members of parliament hailed the government's statement warning that more work must be done as the most human statement ever made by a British government.

The conservative opposition and liberal circles also accepted the survey as a candid diagnosis. These groups, however, lashed out against the government for not laying down a plan to improve the situation.

New difficulties confronted the British when another blizzard set the country back almost to the crisis point in the struggle to overcome the fuel shortage.

A storm which raged for more than 24 hours continued in Britain and caused further transportation tie-ups. Rail and road transport were disorganized by snowfalls which at some points reached 15 inches in depth.

A dispatch by the French press agency reported that China has sent a note to the big four foreign ministers asking the right to take part in the forthcoming March 10 conference.

China, it was said, never would accept decisions on which it had not been consulted, but said that decisions limited to Germany and Austria would be accepted.

CAPITAL BANDIT SUSPECT IS SHOT FLEEING POLICE

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 22—Columbus police shot and captured an armed holdup suspect today after a two-block chase.

The man, Billy Davisson, 20, Clarksburg, W. Va., was caught four hours after an armed bandit hunt by Western Union night manager Ben F. Elliott. Earlier a man with a pistol walked into the Winton grill, and robbed Alex Parkovich, the bartender, of $150.

Police said Davisson admitted both robberies.

The bandit was in Grant hospital with a wound in his left leg below the knee.

SENATORS MAY CUT BUDGET BY FIVE BILLIONS

Republican Leader Favoring Smaller Reduction Sees
New Compromise

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22—A senate Republican leader fighting to hold the overall budget cut to 4-1/2 billion dollars said today that the final house-senate compromise might go as high as 5-1/2 billions.

The estimate was given as the senate put off until next week its expected approval of a 4-1/2 billion dollar reduction in contrast to a house-approved slash of six billions.

"Five or five and one-half billions" was forecast by this responsible Republican as the likely reduction to emerge when house and senate conferees complete their juggling of actions taken by the two houses.

The overwhelming house vote in favor of the six billion cut, plus the predominance of six-billion supporters on the conference committee, was advanced as reason for the ultimate cut in President Truman's budget running deeper than previously indicated.

Sen. Vandenberg (R) Mich., supported the pending amendment for a 4-1/2 billion cut offered by Sen. Millikin (R) Col., senate finance chairman who will be one of the house-senate conferees.

Democrats were generally lining up to vote for the Millikin amendment Monday, on the theory that this was the lesser of "two evils." Many of the minority members, however, were prepared to fight against the final resolution—largely on the ground that the congressional recommendation was not supported by adequate information.

Sen. Myers (D) Pa., in a lengthy closing speech before the senate recessed for the weekend, warned that the budget committee's ceiling on expenditures might doom many worthy flood control projects already authorized by congress and under construction.

Citing his own state, he called attention to dike and reservoir projects at such traditional flood points as Williamsport, Pittsburgh, Wilkes-Barre and Punxsutawney, Pa.

Ration Of 35 Pounds Sugar Seen

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22—Agriculture department officials said today that each American probably will be allowed 35 pounds of sugar in 1947—an increase of 10 pounds over the present annual ration.

Their forecast was based on the allocation by the international emergency food council to the United States of 6,800,000 tons of the world's available sugar supply for this year.

The 1947 allocation represents an increase of 1,400,000 tons over the 5,400,000 tons this country was allotted last year.

Agriculture department officials also predicted a substantial increase in this year's allowance of sugar to American industrial users, who now are limited to 60 percent of the amount they used in a 1941 base period.

LABOR PEACE CITED BY U. S.

Labor Department Points To Record Of Few Strikes
So Far In 1947

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22—The labor department pointed today to a score of important 1947 wage settlements as mounting evidence of a new-found determination on the part of labor and management to avoid strikes.

Edgar L. Warren, U. S. conciliation director, cited this week's west coast oil negotiations as "representative of the earnest effort being made by both unions and employers" to make collective bargaining work. He added:

"Just as it takes two to make a dispute, so it takes two to negotiate an agreement peacefully. Both the employers and the unions in the oil industry are to be commended for their success."

Warren pointed out that the first eight weeks of the year have been free of serious work stoppages, with settlements achieved in several industries which were shut down a year ago—oil, textiles, meat-packing and glass.

Warren said the next major labor-management deadline is in the rubber industry where contracts between the CIO rubber workers and the "big four"—Goodrich, Firestone, Goodyear and U. S. Rubber—expire March 1.

April will be the big month, however, on the industrial scene. John L. Lewis' coal miners have been ordered to stay at work only until March 31; CIO electrical workers' contracts expire in April, and the extension of the steelworkers' agreement runs out April 30.

HAMILTON, BERMUDA, Feb. 22—Charles Amos was shopping for his own taxi cab today and in his pocket he had the $1600 to pay for it.

Blast Blamed On Chemical Work In Lab

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 22—Police and fire department experts revealed today that a secret chemical formula caused the Los Angeles factory explosion in which at least 15 persons perished and 158 others were injured seriously.

Capt. Carl Halder, arson squad chief, said the formula involved the use of perchloric acid and acetic anhydride.

Halder asserted that Dr. Robert M. Magee, head chemist at the O'Connor Electro-Plating plant where the explosion originated was "well aware of the explosive nature of the solution with which he was working."

The police expert added: "We have learned that within the week Doctor Magee remark to a fellow employe—I don't want to be around when this stuff takes off!"

Magee was in the plant at the time of the explosion, possibly supervising installation of a plastic screen in an acid tank, work of which was started an hour and 15 minutes before the terrific blast occurred.

No trace of him has been found. Also missing is Alice Shemeta Iba, 21-year-old Japanese-American girl who was assistant electrical chemist.

Identification of all 15 bodies recovered from the block of smoldering ruins was completed yesterday but search of the wreckage was continued for others possibly trapped.

TWO ARE HURT WHEN AUTO HITS PARKED VEHICLE

Clarence Thorne, Jr., 25, of 416 North Court street, Saturday was in Berger hospital suffering from injuries received when the automobile in which he was riding struck a parked car at 2:30 a. m. Saturday on Watt street.

Patrolmen Turney Ross and Alva Shasteen, who investigated the accident, reported the car was driven east on Watt street by Miss Thais Harden, 22, secretary, Stoutsville, and that when about 200 feet west of Washington street the car swerved to the left side of the street and hit the parked automobile of Denver Greenlee, 224 Watt street. The police report said the Greenlee machine was moved approximately 15 feet.

According to the police report Miss Harden suffered minor head injuries. Both cars were badly damaged, the report said.

REP. HARTLEY CLAIMS GROUP WILL BAN PLAN

Committee Expected To Vote Against Industry-Wide
Collective Bargaining

NEW LAWS BY MARCH 31

Labor Committee Chairman
Lists Seven Points Of
New Legislation

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22—Chairman Hartley (R) N. J., of the house labor committee, predicted today that his group will vote to ban the closed shop and industry-wide collective bargaining.

Hartley said in an interview that committee opinion was hardening in favor of a complete ban on closed shops, including those already in existence. He said that the question of whether union shops should also be included in the proposed ban is still in doubt.

Unlike a closed shop, where an employer contracts to hire only union employees, under a union shop the employer may hire non-union workers but they must subsequently join the labor organization, usually in 30 days, in order to retain employment.

Hartley said the committee had not yet reached agreement on the type of legislation required to outlaw industry-wide bargaining. He said he is inclined to limiting bargaining to the plants of a single company.

The chairman termed "completely unsatisfactory" a proposal by Sen. Ball (R) Minn., that local unions be permitted to bargain within a 100-mile area.

Hartley predicted congress will enact new labor legislation by March 31 "or pretty close to that."

He indicated that his committee also will write into its bill the following:

1. A ban on jurisdictional, wildcat and sympathy strikes.
2. Penalties for secondary boycotts.
3. Prohibitions against strike violence, destruction of property and picketing by non-strikers.
4. A provision permitting employers to communicate with their employees on contract provisions without fear of violating the national labor relations act.
5. Employers as well as employees to be permitted to petition the NLRB for an election.
6. Equality for both employer and employee in collective bargaining.
7. New governmental machinery for mediation and voluntary arbitration.

FIRE FIGHTING FIRMS INDICTED FOR CONSPIRACY

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22—Attorney General Clark had today the return of a criminal indictment in Columbus, O., charging two corporations and four individuals with conspiracy to monopolize production and distribution of motor-driven fire apparatus.

Clark identified the corporations indicted by the federal grand jury as the American-La France-Foamite Corp., Elmira, N. Y., and the Seagrave Corp., Columbus, O.

The three count indictment charges that the two corporate defendants sell approximately 60 percent of the total annual production of motor driven fire apparatus in the United States.

Assistant Attorney General Wendell Berge, in charge of the anti-trust division said:

"The indictment indicates that municipalities pay exorbitant prices for their motor driven fire apparatus."

"The imposition of high prices upon municipalities for this vital equipment seriously hampers the procurement of adequate fire-fighting equipment by our cities and increases the hazards of fire in communities all over the nation."

TAFT OPPOSES EX-TVA CHIEF ON ATOM BOARD

ting Taft's charge that Lillenthal is "muddled" in his international thinking, Morse declared:

"I think Bob's statement is a jumble of muddled prejudices."

Sen. McMahon (D) Conn., predicted Taft's weight will not swing enough Republicans to defeat Lillenthal.

Democrats See Victory

Despite McKellar's optimism, a Democratic leadership spokesman remained confident that the senate outcome will bear out President Truman's prediction that Lillenthal will be confirmed. He said that Taft's opposition was expected and "hasn't changed" the situation.

He predicted that the Democrats will lose not more than eight votes on the issue, and that Republicans are rather evenly divided.

One pro-Lillenthal Republican made the hair-line forecast that Lillenthal will be confirmed by a margin of "just three votes."

31 MEN HELD IN SOUTH CAROLINA LYNCHING CASE

GREENVILLE, S. C., Feb. 22 —Thirty-one men were under formal arrest in Greenville today in connection with the lynching of a Negro last Monday at Pickens, S. C.

Sheriff R. H. Bearden said the entire group was already being held in jail for investigation when he signed the warrants.

They are charged with the slaying of Willie Earle, 35, who was forcibly removed from the Pickens jail and shot and stabbed to death by an unmasked mob.

Bearden said that 26 had signed confessions.

The lynch victim had been jailed in connection with the fatal stabbing of a Greenville taxi-driver. The sheriff said that the men under arrest included 29 cab drivers and two Greenville businessmen.

Jury May Get Clifton Case Sometime Monday

that he and Chief McCrady, Sheriff Charles Radcliff, and other officers including Howard G. Robinson, a Newark private detective, took Clifton to Columbus and that Clifton was questioned in the "crime laboratory" in that city. Patrolman McGinnis gave the testimony under direct examination by Prosecutor Robbins.

Under cross-examination by Defense Attorney Adkins, Patrolman McGinnis said the frame of the revolver was found by him in Clifton's truck the night Clifton voluntarily appeared at police headquarters in Circleville. Patrolman McGinnis denied having removed some cartridges from the dresser drawer in Clifton's home.

State Highway Patrolman Wells testified he was in the police station the night of Nov. 28 when Clifton entered and that he was with Patrolman McGinnis when the latter searched Clifton's truck near the police station. He said the search disclosed a rifle, a 32-caliber revolver, and the witness identified the gun which he said Patrolman McGinnis apparently found in the upholstery of the truck cab. Under cross-examination, however, by Defense Attorney Adkins the witness admitted he did not actually see that the gun in the truck.

Police Chief McCrady testified that Clifton underwent the "lie detector" test at Columbus in the presence of Chief McCrady, Patrolman McGinnis, Patrolman Turney Ross, and Detective Robinson, and that Clifton denied ever having committed any crimes in Circleville.

Chief McCrady further testified that while at Columbus the gun was shown to Clifton and that Clifton denied ever having seen it before. At that time, the witness said, the gun had no cylinder. On December 3, Chief McCrady testified, he and Patrolman McGinnis proceeded to the Clifton home with a search warrant and that Patrolman McGinnis found the gun cylinder. Chief McCrady identified the gun and he declared that both the frame and the cylinder carried the number "13184".

Chief McCrady also testified that he went to the VFW club the morning of Oct. 12 after the burglary and that he was told that "$200 to $250" was missing from a slot machine and that money and cigarettes had been stolen from the back bar.

Under cross-examination Chief McCrady told of the claimed finding of the gun cylinder in the Clifton's home and he said the loot in the burglary consisted of the slot machine money, 18 cartons of cigarettes, $3 in pennies, that he kept a record of theft, and he admitted that his record of the loot in the VFW burglary did not include the revolver among the listed loot.

Chief McCrady admitted that in his opinion "one or more" persons burglarized the VFW club and that he was unable to state just how the thief or thieves left the building because both front and rear doors were found open.

Judge William D. Radcliff decreed a full court session Saturday despite the fact that Saturday is Washington's birthday and a legal holiday.

Rebuttal witnesses to be presented by the state after the defense has finished the presentation of testimony are scheduled to include Detective Robinson.

COLD WEATHER DUE TO REMAIN OVER WEEKEND

By International News Service
Ohio's latest cold spell was aggravated today by winds of 30-mile-an-hour velocity and widely scattered snow flurries.

No relief over the weekend was sighted by weather bureau forecasters, who said this area was continuing to be affected by the eastern storm which has now moved through the New England states.

Low temperatures this morning ranged from 10 degrees above zero at Youngstown to 20 above at Cincinnati. Forecasters said similar low readings could be expected tomorrow and probably Monday.

Natural gas suppliers over the state were hopeful that the closing down of industries over the weekend would give them an opportunity to build up dwindling reserves. Meanwhile, the Ohio Fuel Gas company maintained its gas restriction to 110 of its largest industrial consumers.

Ageless Power

Once the pride of the countryside, the old mill stands in ruin, victim of time's relentless passing. Time brings sunshine and storm, growth and decay—and death. Power that once turned the old mill wheel flows on. The wheel itself is stilled.

All things made by man must crumble. Even the giant skyscrapers of our great cities must one day lie in ruin or be replaced. Only the forces set in motion by the Creator of all things have functioned since the beginning of time, will live on to infinity.

How often a builder has stood back with a sigh of pride at the completion of some structure whose finished design he had long dreamed about. Perhaps he felt that in a sense his mission had been performed and he considered the impact of his creation on the generations to come. With the passing of time, however, both the man and his dream have become a part of the forgotten past.

The power of God, however, flows on. New men come forth to build the monuments of another day. The mountains still pour down their water into the streams, the streams flow into the rivers and the rivers into the sea.

Likewise the power of God, and the gift of the Holy Ghost, flow into the souls of those who seek Him, renouncing worldly pride and selfishness. In the churches of our world, those who seek spiritual solace and inspiration find the knowledge and opportunity to achieve the "peace that passeth understanding" through faith which shall make all things possible.

The Good Shepherd

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL
(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for Feb. 23 is John 10, the Memory Verse being John 10:14, "I am the good shepherd; and I know mine own, and mine own know Me.")

JESUS THE Good Shepherd.
This chapter of John is a beautiful one. "The good shepherd, Jesus says, enters the door into the sheep fold. The thief who would steal the sheep, comes in some other way.

At night in Palestine the sheep are brought to the fold by the shepherd after the day's grazing. The fold is a walled enclosure such as may be seen in American sheep farms. A porter guards the sheep at night, and in the morning the shepherd comes to take them out again. As the different shepherds enter the fold, each calls to his own sheep and they know his voice and follow him. They will not follow a voice they do not know. "And a stranger will they not follow, but will flee from him for they know not the voice of strangers."

Later Jesus says, in the same chapter, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, I am the door of the sheep. All that ever came before Me are thieves and robbers; but the sheep do not hear them. I am the door; by Me if any man enter in, he shall be saved, and shall go in and out, and find pasture."

False prophets had come before Christ. The rulers of the synagogues strove to make the people follow the rules laid down for them, to observe the forms and ceremonies, but they did not touch their hearts and souls. Jesus showed them—or tried to—how to live and what to believe that they might be saved, but "they understood not what things they were which He spake unto them."

Would Give His Life
Continuing the parable, Jesus told them that He was the good shepherd who would give His life for his sheep. Well He knew that sooner or later if He continued His teaching, He would be killed—would give up His earthly life. He was willing. He had only to cease preaching and healing to save Himself. He could have gone to any quiet place and been still, and no one would have molested Him. But that was not His mission. That was to give His life for the sheep.

"But he that is a hireling, and not the shepherd, whose own the sheep are not, seeth the wolf coming, and leaveth the sheep, and fleeth; and the wolf catcheth them, and scattereth the sheep. The hireling fleeth, because he is an hireling, and careth not for the sheep."

The hireling was being paid to care for the sheep, but they were not his, and if danger came he would run and leave them to their fate. "As the Father knoweth Me, even so know I the Father; and I lay down My life for the sheep. . . . No man taketh it from Me, but I lay it down of myself. I have power to lay it down, and have power to take it again. This commandment have I received of My Father."

The Jews were divided in their feelings toward this Man who preached so strangely. Some said, "He hath a devil, and is mad; why hear ye him?" Others said, "These are not the words of him that hath a devil. Can a devil open the eyes of the blind?"

Jesus in Jerusalem
This sermon on the good shepherd was given in Jerusalem in October, A. D. 29, the latter events occurred in December of the same year, also at Jerusalem. Jesus walked in the temple in Solomon's porch. The Jews came around Him and said, "How long dost Thou make us to doubt? If Thou be the Christ, tell us plainly."

Jesus answered them, "I told you, and ye believed not; the works that I do in My Father's name, they bear witness of Me. But ye believed not, because ye are not of My sheep, as I said unto you. My sheep hear My voice, and I know them, and they follow Me. . . . My Father which gave them to Me is greater than all; and no man is able to pluck them out of My Father's hands, I and My Father are one."

At that the Jews took stones to stone Him, and Jesus said to them, "Many good works have I shewed you from My Father; for which of those works do ye stone Me?"

They said, "For a good work we stone thee not; but for blasphemy; and because that Thou, being a man, makest Thyself God."

Jesus had the answer for them then, too, quoting their own scriptures (Psalm 82:6): "Is it not written in your law, I said, Ye are gods? If He called them gods, unto whom the word of God came, and the scripture cannot be broken: Say ye of him, whom the Father hath sanctified, and sent into the world, Thou blasphemest; because I said, I am the Son of God?"

"If I do not the works of My Father, believe Me not. But if I do, though ye believe not Me, believe the works; that ye may know, and believe, that the Father is in Me, and I in Him."

Again they sought to take Him, but He slipped away, and went beyond Jordan to the place where John had baptized Him, "for His time was not yet come."

THE SPIRIT OF PARTY

WITH A long and hard campaign already started, a year and a half yet to go, this is a good time to refresh the memory as to Washington's warning on the subject of parties. Here it is, slightly shortened: "I have already intimated to you the danger of parties in the state, with particular reference to the founding of them on geographical discriminations. Let me now warn you in the most solemn manner against the baneful effects of the spirit of party, generally. This spirit, unfortunately, is inseparable from our nature, having its root in the strongest passions of the human mind. It exists under different shapes in all governments.

"The alternate domination of one faction over another, sharpened by the spirit of revenge, natural to party dissension, is itself a frightful despotism. But this leads at length to a more formal and permanent despotism. The disorders and miseries which result gradually incline the minds of men to seek security and repose in the absolute power of an individual; sooner or later the chief of some prevailing faction, more able or more fortunate than his competitors, turns this despotism to the purposes of his own elevation, on the ruins of public liberty.

"Without looking forward to an extremity of this kind, the common and continual mischiefs of the spirit of party are sufficient to make it the interest and duty of a wise people to discourage and restrain it.

"It serves always to distract the public councils and enfeeble the public administration. It agitates the community with ill-founded jealousies and false alarms; kindles the animosity of one part against another, foments occasionally riot and insurrection. It opens the door to foreign influence and corruption, which find a facilitated access to the government itself through the channels of party passions. Thus the policy and the will of one country are subjected to the policy and will of another.

"There is an opinion that parties in free countries are useful checks upon the administration of the government and serve to keep alive the spirit of liberty. This within limits is probably true. There will always be enough of party spirit for every salutary purpose. And, there being constant danger of excess, the effort ought to be, by force of public opinion, to mitigate and assuage it. A fire not to be quenched, it demands a uniform vigilance to prevent its bursting into a flame, lest, instead of warming, it should consume."

In the 150 years since that speech was delivered, Sept. 17, 1796, parties have proved themselves useful, necessary, inevitable. But surely civilized people could discuss honest differences of opinion and come to agreement or reasonable compromise without party strife and personal bitterness?

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22—The Russians are rolling out, for the March Moscow conference on the German peace treaty, a welcome doormat which is about one inch wide and studded with thistles. What they are up to, no one around the state department appears to know for sure. Yet certainly Stalin's advance propaganda is designed to make all walk a straight and narrow path as Russia directs, and to soften our officials into a frightened tenderness.

Having attacked the American religious and peace minded delegate, George Foster Dulles, as a war monger, the Russian government officially sent a note declaring the state undersecretary Acheson to be "rudely slanderous" and "hostile toward the Soviet Union" for having said simply this: "Russia's foreign policy is an aggressive and expanding one."

Acheson did not volunteer this comment. He offered what the Soviets call "inadmissible behavior" under questioning by a congressional committee on the doubtful Lillienhal appointment. It may be inadmissible for anyone to speak out in Russia, but in a democracy it is paramourly necessary for a government official to answer frankly the questions of congress. Further, what Acheson said would not be inadmissible at a diplomatic pink tea.

The word aggressive means "disposed to vigorous outgoing activity in behalf of an object." Any undeluded person in the realm of reason must consider the term "aggressive" as applied to Soviet diplomacy to be accurately and mildly descriptive. The Soviets have certainly been beligerently aggressive in Iran, have swallowed up Latvia, Estonia and Lithuania, and their Communists pride themselves on being politically aggressive throughout Europe and Asia, as do their delegates in UN.

Acheson also said Soviet policy was "expanding", which means "enlarging, swelling, spreading out." Anyone who claims it is not would do violence to the plain facts which are no secret to any adult American. Russian foreign policy is thoroughly in accord with world Communism, which is bent on world conquest.

Off the record around here, some officials used to say when they saw the Soviets doing violence to language and reason: "The Russians are crazy, but not that crazy." Now these same men say they are not so sure. The behavior of Russia diplomatically of late has been inimical to the simplest of common sense. It is becoming inadmissible to reason.

Diplomats feel they run a danger of Moscow attack if they simply say today: "Russia is Russia," or "today is a fine day." Indeed some wish to send Russia's world activities to a psychiatrist for the answer. However, this is not the general studied viewpoint of the close followers of the Soviet technique. Russia does not bother much about reason, only about reasons. Her motives are less a mystery to the new military regime than to the old Byrnes political crowds which ran the state department for so long. I think the average impression here is that Stalin (through Molotov) has really outdone himself this time in stretching his professed willingness to be offended at the slightest murmur. He has reduced his pressures to absurdity. The old Roosevelt crowd used to consider Stalin's sensitivity as an inferiority complex. This theory held some weight until evidences of the Russian superiority complex accumulated in denial of it after the war.

Treating Throat Disorders With a Powder of Penicillin

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

FOR most types of sore throat, penicillin is the best of remedies, or would be, if it could be kept in contact with the tissues of the throat long enough to kill germs causing the disorder. In the past this has been the problem. Penicillin lozenges and tablets have both been tried, but they dissolve so quickly when placed in the mouth or under the tongue that the effects of the penicillin are too fleeting to do much good, in most cases. Today, however, we have penicillin in a new form—as a powder or snuff. According to Drs. Richard G. S. Meadley and Harold F. Barnard of London, it is most effective when used in this way for the treatment of throat conditions.

In Small Bottle

The penicillin is mixed with sulfathiazole and is kept in a small bottle. A small amount of the mixture is poured onto a piece of paper two inches square, which is creased from one corner to the other. With the head back and one nostril closed with a finger, the mixture is poured from the paper into the other nostril while the patient sniffs it in. The procedure is then repeated on the other side.

The mixture is slowly carried back by the little hair-like structures in the nose known as cilia until it reaches the throat and back surfaces of the tongue. Swallowing and movements of the tongue then bring some of it forward.

Penicillin Still Present

Tests carried out by these physicians showed that penicillin was still present from one to four hours after the use of this snuff. One advantage of this method of treatment is that it brings the penicillin in contact with the tissues of the nose, the back part of the nose, the openings of the sinuses and the middle ear.

About 27 patients with acute tonsillitis were treated with this snuff while 30 others were used as controls and were treated in other ways. In those treated with the penicillin mixture the relief of symptoms was rapid whether the infection was due to streptococci or to Vincent's organisms which cause trench mouth. Those treated with the penicillin made more rapid recoveries and could return to their usual work on an average of two days sooner than the patients treated in other ways.

This looks like the answer to a good many cases of severe sore throat. The treatment is simple, without danger or inconvenience to the patient and far more rapid than any we have had in the past.

* STARS SAY—

For Saturday, February 22

THIS is a holiday with much promise of enjoyment and festivity, but in a thoroughly discreet and conventional manner. There is danger of accident and regret from a breach of the laws, romantic and civic. Judgment may be confused and unreliable and the emotions and impulses ready to take daring chances, impelled by strange contacts or peculiar personalities.

Those whose birthday it is may find a good opening for change and new contacts in social, domestic and cultural life, as well as in business affairs. However, erratic impulses might negate such fair prospects, since judgment is apt to be unreliable. Heed to the conventional and regular in order to avoid regrets.

A child born on this day may have kindly, laudable intentions, but impulses, emotions and mentality might swerve it into the dangerous and erratic path.

For Sunday, February 23 SUNDAY'S Horoscope is an excellent one for seeking promotion, honors, many forms of recognition and preferment from superiors, dignitaries, employers

CHAPTER THIRTY-ONE

IT WAS barely dawn when Cliff saddled and took the trail up through the dripping jungle to Big Swamp. The night air, cool and damp, came flowing down from the hills, but he was only dimly aware of its refreshing touch. A host of doubts beset him as he rode, and the closer he approached the swamp, the more he questioned his own wisdom in coming. He was risking imprisonment and leaving his men without a leader on a long gamble. But he could think of no other way. Whatever the danger, he had to know if Norman and Vicente were actually planning a raid. The vital thing—more vital than ever now—was to prevent a fight with the Blacklanders. That hope alone made it worth the chance.

At the edge of the swamp he forced his unwilling horse down over the bank and out through the stagnant water, following the line of mangroves until at last the low contour of the island showed dimly through the mist. Head bent forward, eyes intent upon his narrow path, Cliff had almost reached the island's edge when he felt his horse rear, and looking up, saw Vicente watching him from the bank.

For a bare instant Cliff hesitated, then touching his horse, climbed out of the marsh. Directly before Vicente he reined in. Not since the night of his capture had he seen the giant Blacklander, and now as he looked again into those tawny, hostile eyes, he felt the same sense of wonder at the bulk and latent strength of that huge figure. Even on horseback Cliff's shoulders were scarcely level with Vicente's.

The Blacklander spoke first. "How do you find this place?"

"I followed Dr. Norman's tracks."

"You were foolish to come here. You will never leave."

"Dr. Norman can decide that. My business is with him."

"And my business is with you," Vicente took a step nearer. "Get off that horse." His voice quivered with the eagerness of a hunting dog; the mouth all too clearly told his intention to force a fight—and conflict was the one thing Cliff wanted to avoid.

"I have no quarrel with you, Vicente," he said quietly. "I came here to see your chief."

At the big breed's laugh, Cliff realized that Vicente thought he was afraid. But it was too late. Before he could speak again, Vicente's arm wrapped about his waist and ripped him bodily from the saddle. Towering over him, the Blacklander took a half step back, then raising his open hand, struck Cliff full in the face. The force of the blow whirled Cliff to the edge of the bank, and barely he saved himself from falling.

Slowly he turned; his own eyes had gone red. His face was on fire, and something within him snapped. The impelling need to avoid a quarrel, the purpose of his visit, were both forgotten. He felt only the sting of that contemptuous blow and the blood, like a hammer, in his ears.

Before him Vicente stood, still smiling, and Cliff took a step forward.

"You asked for this—I didn't,"

he growled. "Come on."

No time for more—swift as a cat Vicente was on him. Twice Cliff struck, twice his fists beat into that huge, dark face, but the big breed closed in for the kill. Before the menace of Vicente's outstretched hands, Cliff gave ground, keeping just beyond arm's length, then, gathering himself, he struck again. His feet caught in the undergrowth, he fell, but was up as Vicente's fingers fastened about his shoulder, and with the strength of desperation Cliff lashed out wildly with both hands. For a second the Blacklander's grasp weakened, and Cliff jerked back with all his might. His shirt ripped to the waist, he felt the fiery stinging of lacerated flesh, but he was free.

Bearlike and crouching, bruised and bloody face thrust forward, Vicente was coming in again, his great gorilla hands weaving horribly. Steadily, mercilessly, he was driving Cliff back to where there would be no room to escape those avid, clutching hands. Cliff saw his danger. Striking, dodging, slashing with long, clean blows, he knew his only hope lay in keeping Vicente away. Time after time he marked the face of his slower adversary, but it was as if Vicente did not even feel the force of blows that would have beaten a smaller man to insensibility.

Almost at the edge of the swamp now—and for both of them almost the end of human endurance. The breath came in strident, labored gasps. Vicente's face was bleeding, and Cliff's torn shoulder burned like fire, but all unmindful and beyond the stab of pain they fought on, like animals, held by the savage urgency of blood-lust, while inch by inch Vicente drove Cliff nearer the edge.

Once more a savage rush forced him a step backwards. There could be no more retreat—he was on the very brink. Ten feet below him lay the yellow waters of the swamp; and steadying himself, Cliff sprang. Suddenly on Vicente's jaw his fist struck home; he saw the big breed wince, but in that same instant two hands closed vice-like about his throat—and held. Frantically, arms hammering like pistons, Cliff rained blow after blow into the other's face, cutting, bruising, failing, to break that killing hold, but the fingers only tightened.

Cliff's lungs were crying for air; his heart pounded in an agony of suffocation, and helplessly he clawed at the steel wrists, while Vicente's arms wrapped about his waist and ripped him bodily from the saddle. Towering over him, the Blacklander took a half step back, then raising his open hand, struck Cliff full in the face. The force of the blow whirled Cliff to the edge of the bank, and barely he saved himself from falling.

of air. Waist deep, he crouched, coughing the water from his lungs, and with trembling hands wiped the scum out of his eyes. He took a wobbly step toward the bank, but at a sound he whirled.

Scarcely a yard away Vicente struggled in the swamp. Shoulder deep, eyes glazed with terror, the breed was beating the stagnant water to yellow froth, and Cliff felt himself sickened in horror—Vicente had been caught in a quicksand pocket. Helplessly clutching the air, the huge hands rose, but the man's very efforts drew him deeper. Already his shoulders were settling beneath the surface.

Frantically Cliff waded toward him, then stopped. Useless to try pulling him out—worse than useless for he would only join Vicente—and scrambling up the bank, Cliff raced to his horse. The animal reared in fright, but seizing the bit, Cliff led him to the water's edge, and uncoiled the riata from his saddle.

With the rope between his teeth, he slid back into the swamp, but at the first step felt the mire sucking at his ankles, and throwing himself flat, he inched forward. A second later he had slipped the noose beneath Vicente's armpits, and hand over hand dragged himself back to shore. Weakly he staggered—he was near the end. For a moment everything reeled before his eyes, then steadying himself, he jerked on the bit. The horse moved a few steps, the rope grew taut.

Again Cliff pulled. The horse strained against the sudden weight, and from down in the swamp came a surging moan, while slowly, like some monster of the depths, the form of Vicente rose from the ooze that covered him, and was dragged to solid ground.

Kneeling, Cliff loosened the rope. The Blacklander's eyes were closed, he lay motionless, scarcely breathing, and twice Cliff tried to raise him, but now the strain of that punishing duel was taking its toll. Feebly, for the last time, Cliff tried to lift the heavy body, then all the world went black.

Cliff woke to a sense of coolness and light. Vaguely he realized that he was lying on a cot, and that by his side an Indian woman sat fanning him. He looked down and saw he was stripped to the waist, and that his shoulder had been bandaged.

Slowly, as his head cleared, he began piecing together disjointed fragments—Vicente, the fight, something else. Something—it was important, but he was too tired to remember. He closed his eyes, giving himself up to the delicious sensation of utter rest, and again he may have slept, for at the sound of a door creaking he saw a man bending over him.

A man not tall, but with strong, vigorous shoulders and thick red hair, graying at the temples. The brow rose high and broad, but it was the eyes that held Cliff—gray eyes, shrewd and understanding. They were gazing at him with look Cliff suddenly remembered—Janet's look, so searching it was almost disconcerting—and in that first impact of mutual appraisal, Cliff recognized Dr. Norman. "The Authority on Authorities"

HE WOULDN'T GIVE UP

GEORGE WASHINGTON had a lot of qualities which would have been useful at the bridge table. Among those was his refusal to give up when things looked dark. He kept right on, with his plucky little army until they won. You can bet that, on defense against a No Trump contract, he would not have discarded from his own established long suit while still retaining a side entry, in order to protect another suit, if there was any reasonable possibility his partner might prevent the game trick there.

A child born on this day will be graciously endowed with sturdy character and abilities and should look forward to a stable future with recognition and support from those in high places.

lowed, on which East had some discarding to do. He put the club 10 on the second of these tricks to let West know where his side entry was located, and on the third and fourth diamond threw his spade 2 and 4—very bad bridge, as that left him only two cards of the suit.

South next brought forth the club K from the dummy. East came right in with the A and cashed his remaining spades, the K and 7. This, however, brought his side's total to only four tricks—all it ever got, for South won the returned heart and walked him with set-up tricks.

CERTIFIED LEGHORN CHICKS
A few cents more invested in good chicks is money wisely invested. With eggs at 4c apiece it only takes 2 or 3 extra eggs next fall to offset the higher cost of 8 to 12c more for a better pullet now. When you buy chick, you are buying next winter's egg production. Every pullet you buy here is the daughter of an R.O.P. male of 275 to 340 eggs and a daughter or granddaughter of a R.O.P. hen of 250 to 343 eggs. Officially no Pullorum reactors the last two years.

NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

Personally I think Stalin learned diplomacy from Hitler. You will recall Hitler was alternately frightening the world and being offended by it, and his technique brought him many things he wanted.

That game somehow has worn out. People are familiar with it, particularly military people. They are less inclined to fall into whatever pattern of action the dictators try to annoy them. Words and politics change them. They want to know the facts and they want to act on the facts. In view of this maintenance of realism, what the state department and General Marshall in his official note responding to the Russian protest have said publicly about the incident, is really only a part of what they actually think.

I wish someone would call me "aggressive" and "expanding" in my endeavors. I would consider it a high compliment.

FANS BROUGHT HANK INTO FOLD

Greenberg Signs Contract With Pirates After Urging By Public

NEW YORK, Feb. 22—There was neither ulterior design nor hanky-panky of any sort behind Hank Greenberg's extended program of hot-and-cold running tactics with the Pittsburgh Pirates, and right decisively did he say so today.

He said, in fact, that there had been very little hesitancy on his part—and only one change of mind.

That was when he signed an estimated $65,000 one-year contract with the Pirates yesterday. Two weeks before, he'd publicly announced that he wouldn't.

What finally did cause him to change his mind. Two things, said the 1946 major league home run champion, and it seemed that neither of these was persistence by the Pittsburgh management. The latter, according to Hank, was a more or less negative factor in influencing his final decision.

It was the Pittsburgh fans who caused the reversal with letters of appeal which he said numbered hundreds.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

One-Minute Test

1. Can you answer these three Biblical questions: Where did the marriage feast occur when Jesus performed His first miracle by turning water into wine?
2. Where did the miracle of the raising of Lazarus take place?
3. On what sea did Jesus walk?

Words of Wisdom

Nothing is harder to direct than a man in prosperity; nothing more easily managed than one in adversity.—Plutarch.

Today's Horoscope

The person who has a birthday today should cultivate self-confidence, self-esteem, and a better outlook on life. You are too apt to be pessimistic. You are capable of great things, if you will accept the present happiness and not worry about the future. You are generous to a fault, and can love deeply. This morning may have proved depressing and troublesome, but later in the day optimism is in the air. Do not let yourself be deceived by specious promises during the year now starting. Avoid extravagance and law. Peruse all documents carefully, and do not let your heart rule your head. Generous and very kind-hearted will be the child who is born today, fond of travel but threatened with serious trouble through false friends, correspondence and imprudence.

Fixes on Etiquette

It is not necessary to thank a maid or waitress when she passes food to you at dinner.

Horoscope for Sunday

You always will enjoy good health and prosperity. You are far-sighted, determined, and well-balanced, just, loving and generally well liked by all your friends and associates. Your home is very dear to you. This day inclines toward confusion, wishful thinking and incitations. The evening, however, favors public contacts and dealing with groups. Conflicting influences predispose to some gain in your next year, followed by loss through deception or over-generosity. Watch expenditure. Have nothing to do with get-rich-quick schemes. Keep to routine. A child who is born on this day should early be taught to realize the value of money and not to allow the emotions undue sway. Friends and business associates will need to be carefully chosen.

One-Minute Test Answers

1. At Cana.
2. Bethany.
3. The Sea of Galilee.

SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK

By R. J. SCOTT

Reasons

PETER LORRE GUEST

Peter Lorre will guest on the Music Hall on Thursday, February 27, at 9 p. m. Emcee Eddy Duchin and comedy star Eddie Foy will be his hosts, and music for the half-hour variety program will be provided by Vocalist Milena Miller, the Mills Brothers, and Russ Case and his orchestra. Three of Peter Lorre's most recent pictures—"The Chase," "The Verdict" and "Beast With Five Fingers" have had murder as their main theme. He has been cast in so many mysteries that he is practically able to solve the perfect crime himself! The monotony of this typing has called on him, however, and he is expected to tell Eddy Duchin Thursday night that he really wants to do a musical comedy for a change. With Duchin, key-board artist extraordinaire, and Foy, former star of "The Red Mill", around to coach him, he should go far in modern musical extravaganzas.

which time Kaye and his ABC "Sunday Serenade" crew will settle down in New York for a lengthy engagement at the Capitol Theatre.
